So many skills ...

This activity is a real favourite of mine as it teaches so much while being a way to make a game or build at the same time. The perseverance and the coordination when it all gets fiddly is a great skill to develop at a young age.

The best bit is, it is so easy to do...a few cardboard rolls and some straws and you can make your own at home too. The 'talk time' that happens alongside is so beneficial as well; "what colour straw?", "how many have you used?", "how could you join them together?", "what are you making?".

The simple things are often the best 😊

When I grow up ...

This theme will continue next week as the ladies have loved to hear about everyone's ideas. So, the next steps will be to explore their suggestions coming from the children, to follow voice and show that they are heard. We'll see farms next week, as well as buildings and perhaps even a ballerina too!

Not feeling very well ...

This week we have experienced a bout of the virus that is currently doing the rounds - we sent NHS information about this a few weeks ago. We have been sharing a consistent message about covering our mouths if we cough, keeping our hands clean and disposing of tissues. Please take advice from your pharmacist or if needs be your doctor to make sure the correct treatment is carried out. We really hope we all get well soon.
